The StudioEleven collective was formed in 2014 by a group of independent artists who work and study with artist Tom Wudl at his DTLA studio. LOCKDOWN ART: Reflections of StudioEleven Practices exhibits the work of nineteen artists, who like so many during the pandemic were relatively isolated from normal social interactions. Taking advantage of this time and space for reflection, philosophic inquiries became the operating basis for creative processes in art making. We shared our art, art making processes, thinking, and home settings with StudioEleven colleagues via zoom. Tom Wudl offered a plethora of knowledge through lectures on ancient Chinese, Renaissance, and Contemporary art and artists. We observed our surroundings. We found materials within our homes and drew, painted and collaged, sometimes combining text and poetry. Our art gained more personal, contemplative, and meditative focus as our hopes, and also fears, elevated awareness and resolve in the healing power of art.
